"A book no woman can read without tears."

JUST PUBLISHED,

HOSPITAL SKETCHES:

By Miss L. M. ALCOTT.

Price 50cts.

Several of the Sketches in this volume were published serially in the Tribune, and have been widely copied by the press. The author has received many private letters from several journals, and desires to copy many private letters of thanks from readers. A few extracts may suffice to show what was thought of them: "They are received with universal favor"—Commonwealth.

"A collection of uncommon merit. . . . Fluent and sprightly in style, with touches of quiet humor and pathos, revealing what would otherwise be a topic of indifference and dullness. The author's narrative is full of healthful sentiments, and she depicts the heroic heroism that would minister to his joys and suffering. The contrast between the comic incidents and the tragic experience of a single night, gives in No. 2 of the series a powerfully dramatic effect."—Commonwealth.

"The plot of John is a noble and touching lesson. . . . Exceedingly well written, and the clever portions of thrilling interest. There is a quiet vein of humor, too, running all through them so that the reader is almost moved to laughter and tears."—Waverley.

"We say that I thank you for writing them from the bottom of my heart, would poorly express the sentiment which dictates to me the desire that I should have them in the hands of those with whom they touch me, to pass a tribute to which I fancy will be rather unexpected."—These papers have revealed to me much that is elevated, and pure, and refined in the soldier's character which I never before suspected. It is humiliating to me that I have had no time to write to you, but I have now done so, and I hope you will receive it with pleasure. If for myself, and I thank you for showing me how different eyes and ears you have arrived among "the men" from the organ which I use on the very same cause and at the same time."—From the Hon. J. C. H. Smith.

"It would be difficult to tell you how much it has been to me to hear such pleasant words as these. I am sure it will be but a trifling trouble to you to hear how much pleasure an old man like me has taken in your charming pictures of hospital service in the Commonwealth, and how refreshing he found them. I have given them to many friends, and I will now do the same, and most willingly do it, so I will not dwell on those particulars. But say all I have to say in this summary form, to wit: that I am so delighted with your beautiful papers, and the evidence they afford of your exquisite humanity, that I have the desire to contribute to your fine friends. . . . With the kindest regards and affection, yours, HENRY JAMES.
